

New PAR Fittings

David Hersey, who has used everything from aircraft landing lights to torch bulbs, is just the sort of person who understands the value of PAR lights. David Hersey Associates Ltd have announced two units for PAR 46 and 56 lamps. The technical data for the PAR 46 (shown here) is: Input voltage 220-240V Output 5.5V, Watts 25. The fitting can be supplied ready to accept a standard hook clamp for 48mm bars or for direct attachment to a 'besa' box. Its standard colour is black but other colours are available to special order.

The cool running of the lamp enables it to be colour-sprayed to almost any colour, but a colour frame is available to utilise standard ranges of gel.

The fitting for the PAR 56 lamp is a scaled down PAR CAN. It comes with a range of adjustments and with a colour frame. Like the PAR 46 fitting, its standard colour is black but other colours are available.

Strand's new portable lighting control

Strand's new Tempus lighting control system is about to be launched as we go to press so a proper assessment will have to wait for a later issue. Basically it seems to be a development of their Mini II system. The desk is available as a six way lever control box or as a 12, 18, 24, 30 or 36 way, two pre-set desk. There is also a 12 way extension desk designed to save expense when expansion of the system is required. There are two new features, a dipless crossfade between pre-sets and an auto-timer facility on the crossfader.
