

Puts the drama into any production at a price which is pure comedy.

Avolites lighting control equipment has long been the professionals' first choice.

It has the power and versatility to create the perfect combination of technology and art.

But technology has always had its price, until now.

The new Precept range of lighting control consoles are the first of their size to put the power of full computer control within the reach of the most budget-conscious operator.

Their reliability and simplicity, there are no complex keyboards or keystroke routines, make them a delight to use.

If you simply need a digital to analogue convertor, or visa versa, then we have an inexpensive answer too. The Linklight Multiplexer, pictured above, will act both as a receiver and transmitter.

So there you have it. Everything you'd expect from Avolites, except the price.

In fact, with these savings, you could be laughing all the way to the bank.
